PROFILE

I always put the health of the person in the foreground, and I have a passionate interest in medical-scientific research. I am flexible, agile to learn, with a positive attitude and ready to adapt to different cultures and environments. My most recent experience as a Preclinical Research student has allowed me to develop excellent skills in organization and prioritization. I also learned to apply a structured and results oriented approach. During an internship as a pharmacist, I learned to establish good relationships with patients and I acquired some pharmaceutical legislation and accounting skills. I am currently planning to conduct a Master's Degree in Clinical Research, which can give me the opportunity to find my future profession in this area.
